Gross gaming revenue (GGR) in Macao during the Chinese New Year holiday period has been disappointing, reports indicate. So what does this mean for the world's gambling capital?

WORLD IN MOTION: CHINESE NEW YEAR
The Hong Kong-based travel agency, Jet China, is a provider of airport child with extremely high traffic. One of the largest annual human migrations in the world, the airport is expected to be the busiest in the world during the period, with the airport handling the largest number of passengers. The Chinese New Year holiday, a week-long break for mainland Chinese, is expected to be a boon for Macao. The airport is expected to handle a record number of passengers, with a significant increase in the number of passengers per year over the holiday, according to Jet China.

Chinese New Year fails to boost Macao GGR

Despite reporting an increase in visitors across the Chinese New Year period, gaming revenues in Macao continue to underperform. An International Casino Review report to press, analysts were expecting monthly gross gaming revenue (GGR) to hit before MACT's (27th) in February for the first time in five years.

China's Chinese New Year, which started on February 18, is traditionally a period for Chinese tourists and the peak gambling season in the Sino-Portuguese colony. According to data from the city's Public Security Police, total arrivals to Macao, including the arrivals during the first three days of Chinese New Year, were up 10% per cent year-on-year to about 750,000.

However, Equinox has reported that Macao's average daily GGR for the period of February 18-22, the first anniversary of average daily table revenue in Macao, was HK$1.05 bn (US$132m) for the week to February 22, a 10% decline on the previous year's corresponding period, according to data from the city's Public Security Police.

"We are disappointed by the weak results since the data includes the results from the first five days of Chinese New Year, which is typically the busiest part of the holiday," a Jet China analyst said. "Last year, revenue rose 10% over the first five days of the holiday, but this year, revenue rose only 10% over the first five days of the holiday, according to official figures from the Gaming Inspection and Coordination Bureau (GICB), gaming revenues in 2014 hit US$ 2.2 bn, ending an 11-year run of increases."

Jet China analysts were hoping that the Chinese New Year would finally bring relief to Macao's gaming industry. However, they say the decline was much expected given the tough post-2008 recovery and the recent increase in tourist visa restrictions and greater scrutiny regarding tickets.
